

Chapter 22: Jack

Excerpt from “Make Your Own History”

I love airports. There’s opportunity all around. I love flight delays even more. It’s the waiting that works in your favor. That and the sheer number of women.

If you frequent international airports, like I do, it’s like an all-you-can-eat European buffet. You don’t even have to speak their language. Never let that little mental block get in your way. Most speak English anyway. Do yourself a favor and learn these three phrases in as many languages as you can:

“Hello.”

“You are beautiful.”

“Do you speak English?”

With these three phrases, and some simple basic eye contact (see: Chapter 5), you’ve just opened pants around the world.

But, Jack, what if she doesn’t speak English? Not your problem. You are there to listen to her, not understand her. Adore her, not converse with her. Look into her eyes while smiling.

All the rest is useless crap.

Take it from me. I’ve been with women from 34 different countries and I only know how to speak those three power phrases in 18 languages. Still, at less than 50% language comprehension, I’m at 100% success.

Besides, German and Dutch are very similar languages.